SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

In September 1949 eight little papooses, Carol Baker, Karen Clary, Kathleen Deck, Kay Frushour, Martha Henry, Donna Ross, Cheryl Small, and Joe Waymire, left their cozy wigwams and went to the council lodges to learn to take their places in the world. Mrs. Powlen made them welcome, and they began to learn to read and write. During their first year they were joined by Alberta Wipperman, David Jones, Audrey Adams, Andrea Hicks, and Julia Bendikas. The second year there were ten little Indians under Mrs. Powlen's guidance; Cheryl Small, David Jones, Andrea Hicks, and Julia Bendikas had left to join another tribe, but we welcomed Chuck Basham, Richard Tabler, and Arthur Fry. By this time the little Indians felt that they were well on their way to becoming big chiefs.

In their third year Mrs. Winn bravely undertook to further the education of the little tribe which was enlarged by Betty Curry, George Leazenby, Walter Leazenby, Kay Herd, and Andrea Hicks. During this year Richard Tabler and Walter Leazenby left. During the fourth year under Mrs. Winn, the tribe became bigger and bigger with the addition of Doug Myers, Ruth Swank, Edgar Tharp, Alice Thompson, Jerry Kelley, and Nancy Hunter and the loss of only two, Edgar Tharp and Alberta Wipperman. They left Mrs. Winn's room with memories of monitors, citizenship marks, bubble gum, rings on the board, and multiplication tables.

Through the next two years, Mr. Jones was the lucky (or maybe unlucky) chief who guided the Indians, who had earned their name honestly by then. During the fifth year Paul Graham, Ralph Allen, and Donald Pugh made themselves welcome in the tribe. This was the year that the class ahead of them felt themselves well versed in the ways of school and proceeded to enlighten the fifth grade, much to Mr. Jones' distress. It was this year that Mr. Jones saw to it that anyone wishing to turn around in his seat had his wish granted in full. During this eventful year they lost Ralph Allen and George Leazenby. By their second year Mr. Jones had become well acquainted with them, so he proceeded to prepare them for junior high school. During this year Martin Cripe introduced himself, and Donald Pugh and Alice Thompson bade farewell. With sorrow at leaving, but great joy in achieving advancement, the tribe approached their bows and arrows prepared to venture into the vast upstairs.

Their first day as seventh graders they were regarded by the seniors as the "noisy brats" and by the "all-knowing" eighth grade, as "greenies." They were regarded by their teachers with indecision. Karen Grandstaff and Lorna Hicks arrived to aid them. Mr. Bowen helped the tribe organize and guided them. As they trooped on to the eighth grade, they were delighted to discover that now they were next to the windows, blinds, and registers and could freeze or bake to their heart's content--that is, if they could ignore the cries and wails of the seventh grade. They started off the year with two new members, George Leazenby and Sherry Zimmerman. During the year Martin Cripe, Nancy Hunter, and George Leazenby left their company. Miss Hall was their sponsor; the tribe, looking forward to that far-away senior trip, sold candy.

As they entered high school, they held many pow-wows in the class and student council, guided and advised by their chiefs, their main chief being Mr. Allen. Charlene Parkinson and Mary Smith added their presence to the tribe of the now not-so-little Indians; however, they both left at the end of the year. The young braves began to be interested in basketball, the maidens in other activities, and their freshman year quickly slipped by. They finished their freshman year with a vague knowledge of algebra and biology. In the sophomore year Carol Hunt and Iva Farris joined them in the search for adventure for a short time and then moved out along with Paul Graham. Mr. Plonski tried to guide them along the straight and narrow way. They held an all-day car wash which was memorable both to the kids and to the owners! Ten survived to become juniors. With their eyes on the not-so-distant senior trip, they (accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Moss) were helped down the financial road by the class play, carnival, magazine sales, and concessions. By this time most of the maidens and braves had reached the age of sixteen; but instead of learning to ride horses, they became drivers of cars, which are just many horses put together. The Prom was the big event of this year. The same ten advanced to the senior class and worked together the last year of high school. The first semester they enjoyed sitting in the senior row by the windows and radiators; but when Mr. Shipman saw the need for a new seating arrangement, the senior boys secretly rejoiced; for they could sleep better in a quiet study hall. Senior cords appeared, a play was presented under the guidance of Mr. Pruitt, Christmas cards were sold, and the yearbook prepared. Their sponsor was Mr. Ebel, whom they often left "bewildered and bewitched." May 12 was G-day, and the seniors moved to schools of higher education or other occupations in life. Best wishes for the future to Chuck Basham, Karen Clary, Betty Curry, Kay Frushour, Karen Grandstaff, Kay Herd, Doug Myers, Jerry Kelley, Donna Ross, and Joe Waymire.

PROPHECY

Some Indians were believed to have the ability to see into the future, but I do not have this gift. Therefore, in 1975 when I happened to discover the whereabouts of some of my old friends, I was somewhat surprised to find that the Great Spirit had led them into some unusual paths.

I had completed my business in San Francisco, had refueled my jet at a space station to prepare for my trip back to New York, and was on my way. My jet developed engine trouble over the Midwest, so I landed immediately at a modern space station and started walking over to the main office. A brilliant sign over the building read WAYMIRE & BENNETT, INC. As I entered the main office and approached the desk, I noticed that the receptionist looked familiar. When she turned from her typewriter, I recognized her at once as BETTY CURRY of the class of '61. We talked for a while, and she told me that JOE WAYMIRE, a former classmate, owned this fine station. Suddenly a door behind me opened, and three well-dressed business men entered the room. Joe was one of them, and the other two were CHUCK BASHAM and DOUGLAS MYERS. Joe asked what had brought me back to Lucerne, and I explained that I had made a forced landing not knowing I was so near to the old home town.

Since Joe's mechanics were busy, I had to remain until morning. Chuck and Doug took me into town. They said they were in business together selling new and used jets. It was six o'clock when I reached the hotel, so I decided to try the restaurant Chuck and Doug had recommended, "Kay's Diner." As I entered someone said, "Hello, Dan." It was DONNA ROSS. She informed me that KAY FRUSHOUR owned this restaurant and several others. Donna was managing the one in Lucerne. I asked about KAY HERD and KAREN CLARY, and she said they had become scientists and had developed several new wonder drugs.

I returned to the hotel and began to read the paper in the lobby. A headline caught my eye, "Professor KAREN GRANDSTAFF Speaks at P.T.A." She had become an expert in the field of child psychology and lectured frequently. My interests are more in the line of sports, so I turned to the sports section and again met an old schoolmate. Under the headline "JERRY KELLEY Voted the Coach of the Year" I read that Jerry had coached Lucerne to the Universal Basketball Championship. This was too much, so I laid the paper aside and went to my room.

As I lay on my bed that night, I thought how exciting this day had been, and I realized that perhaps I could forsee the future. Although I had not anticipated the particular fields in which the members of the class of '61 would achieve their goals, I had always felt that they would be as successful in life as they had been in school. I saw that this had come true.

SENIOR CLASS WILL

I, Charles Basham, do bequeath my ability to be quiet to Tim Marshall and Mick Scheetz; my ability to get my lessons, to the junior boys; and my height, to Fred Minnick.

I, Karen Clary, do bequeath my natural (believe it or not) blonde hair to Rex Waymire, so he won't have to buy peroxide; my cheerleading position, to Diane, my sister; and my old Pontiac, to Larry Hayden, if he has any more wrecks (a few dents won't make any difference).

I, Bette Curry, do bequeath my ability to stay out of trouble in Mr. Clayburn's study hall to the junior boys so they won't all end up with writer's cramp before they graduate; to my dear brother, Larry, a year's supply of pain pills for the many aches and pains which he seems to acquire so easily; and to Susan Marshall, my naturally "bleached blonde" hair, because a certain gentleman prefers blondes.

I, Kay Frushour, do bequeath my ability to pick out good library books to Kathy Deck, so she may stay in good with Mrs. Moss. To Mr. Clayburn I leave my hair that was cut off, so the kids will stop calling him Robert Hall; to Alberta Wipperman, my ability to finish school at Lucerne; to my sister, Joy, my books, so she may make better grades than I; and to my lab partner, Janet Carmicheal, my ability to ignore the junior boys.

I, Karen Grandstaff, do bequeath all my leftover pencils and paper to Dave Kelley, so that he won't have to start out his senior year borrowing them from someone else. To my brother, Doug, I will a year's supply of excuses, so that he may enjoy next year's illnesses with less stress and strain on the brain. To Bob Barrett I will my ability to get in and out of trouble inconspicuously, so that he won't have to waste any of his senior year writing from the encyclopedia.

I, Kay Herd, do bequeath my nickname of "Freepy Frances" to Fred Minnick, so he may become known as "Freepy Fred"; to Rex Waymire, my reputation of always being "broke," so he can keep the girls from his door; and to Susan Marshall, my height for obvious reasons.

I, Jerry Kelley, do bequeath my ability to play the son of Mickey Mouse to Tim Marshall, so he may become a greater comedian; and my ability to take life easy, to my brother, so he won't become exhausted for the first time.

I, Doug Myers, will my ability to do nothing to David Kelley, who "works so hard." I will my ability to "dunk" a basketball to Tim Marshall, so he can be a star center next year.

I, Donna Ross, do bequeath my position as class treasurer to my sister, Sandra, so we can keep the money in the family; and to the Freshman girls I will my ability to stay out of trouble in Mr. Shipman's study hall.

I, Joe Waymire, bequeath my ability to get to school on time to Larry Curry, so he won't have to use such excuses as "I got lost on the way to school." To my brother, Rex, I leave my ability to leave my hair its natural color; to Tim Marshall, the ability to stay out of the office except for friendly visits; and to the teachers I will a bottle of aspirin to take care of the headaches they will receive from the Senior Class of 1962.

We, the Seniors of 1961, leave the juniors our seats by the windows; Mrs. Fickle, the waste paper behind the encyclopedias; and our books, slightly used, to the underclassmen.

Picture writing was the thing in Indian days. We like pictures, too.
 Therefore we present a picture of our Spotlight staff at work, which tells more than can be expressed in words.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Seated: Dandy Burrough, Kay Herd, Jerry Kelley, Mr. Shipman, Barbara Haselby.
 Standing: Tom Briggs, Jim Shafer, Mark Jones, Mary Ann Woodhouse, Tom Deck, Mary Ellen Scheetz, Jo Ellen Scheetz, Vivian Stair.

The Student Council meeting is the scene of many a pow-wow between the big chief, Mr. Shipman, and the tribes' representatives. Here school activities, such as the Halloween Festival and P.T.A. sponsored dances (not war dances, fortunately), are suggested, and school problems are discussed.

LATIN CLUB

Seated: Miss Hall, Mary Ellen Scheetz, Karen Thompson, Jane Barrett, Barbara Haselby, Janet Carmicheal.
 Standing: Larry Yegerlehner, Bob Barrett, Larry Hayden, Tom Deck, Dandy Burrough, Mick Scheetz, Jim Barr, Larry Curry, Tim Marshall.

The big event of the year for the Latin Club is the Feast of the Saturnalia. At this event all members wear Roman garments, new members act as slaves, Roman food is served, the diners recline at table, and everyone has a wonderful time. Miss Hall helps the group recapture the delights of Roman days.
